MAYOR EDSON'S DELIBERATION.

THE UNEXPIRED TERM FIGHT MONTHS INSIEAD OF SIXTEEN—MR. KELLY'S DECLINATION.

Mayor Edson has not fixed upon any one to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Controller Campbell. He would have been much pleased hat Alexander E. Orr consented to take the position when offered him. Mr. Orr's business enterprises so engross his attention that he cannot give to the duties of the Finance Department the time it requires, and he cannot withdraw from his business altogether. The Mayor is very likely to let the appointment go for several days. He has ten days from next Wednesday, the date of Controller Campbell's resignation, under the provisions of the law within which to appoint his successor. The business of the Department will not suffer. Deputy Controller Storrs has been acting as Controller for several weeks past, under Mr. Campbell's appointment, and will continue to do so until the new head of the Finance D-partment is chosen.

The appointment to fill the vacancy resting with the Mayor alone, not being subject to confirmation by the Board of Aldermen, Mr. Edson, it is said, will be doubly careful in his selection. He feels that the position is one outside of politics. He is of the comion that many of the methods of the Finance Department are old-fashioned, and should be superseded by methods less cumbersome, more suited to the times and like those in use in the large banking-houses of this and other cities. The coupon frauds have shown that one of the methods employed in the Finance Department was not only inadequate to prevent great loss to the city, but that several years might clapse before the fact that stealing was going on would be found out. Hence he wishes the new appointee to be a man who has a thorough knowledge of the routine connected with large financial transactions and who can simplify the deciais in such a wy that long-continued stealing shall be rendered impossible. "There is one point in connection with this matter," said a close friend of the Mayor yesterday of a man in whom he has the order connection.

Notwithstanding that President Reilly and several of the Tammany Alderman called on the Mayor on Saturday and presented the name of John Kelly for the vacancy, Mr. Kelly is not a candidate for the position. Recently he requested a mutual friend of the Mayor and himself to say to Mr. E ison that he was not a candidate for the Controllership in case it became vacant, and that under no circumstances would be accept it. Furthermore, that he would not accept any public office at the present time, his own financial affairs requiring all his time and attention.

time, his own financial affairs requiring all his time and attention.

It was asserted on Saturday that Mr. Edson had invited a sarry of friends to meet him that evening to consult relating to the Controllership and those whom he deemed eligible for the position. There was no groundflor this report. Mr. Edson, had no consultation with friends relative to this matter. He left the City Hall at an early hour in the afternon and is inced his family at the Hotel Brighton, Long Branch. Yesterday he enjoyed a much-needed day of rest, free from the cares of office and the importantities of the politicians. He will return to town lo-day.

CLOAK-MAKERS RETURNING TO WORK.

CLOAK-MAKERS RETURNING TO WORK.

The cloak-makersheld a large meeting at Concordia Hall, No. 28 Avonue A, yesterday. Representatives from all the shops, which had been on strike, were present and much enthusiasm was manifested. Speeches were made in German by Jacob Schroeder, of Baltimore; L. Heppuer, Hugo Levy and E. Krande, of New-York; and in English by Eugene Braun. Resolutions were passed expressing joy at the victorious termination of the strikes in most of the shops and a determination to keep up the Union and to make it even stronger than it has been heretofore.

The strike in nearly over, all the manufacturers, with the exception of the Manhattan Suit and Cloak Company, Mayer & Jonasson and Dauzig Brothers having agreed to the terms demanded by the strikers. Danzig Brothers have sent for the schedules, and are expected to sign to-day. The representatives of the Manhattan Suit and Cloak Company and Mayer & Jonasson are expected to return from Europe by Tuesday, and the sirikers confidently expect that an agreement will then be reached. All the employees of the firms that have surrendered will return to work to-day. A number of the contractors have signified their intention of agreeing to the demands to-day. A few of them hold out, however, and treat the committees that are sent by the strikers with continuely. It is the intention of the union to keep the hands of such contractors out for a while as a punishment.

FATAL EFFECTS OF LIGHTNING.

North Salem, was also struck by lightning and two valuable horses were killed, the stable being destroyed.

A laborer on the Carroll Conover farm, at Flatlands, was instantly killed by a stroke of lightning while at work in the potato field during the thunder storm of Saturday. He had been on the farm only a short time and was known by the name of "Jimmy." Other men were at work near him who were uninjured.

The thunder shower passed over portions of Queens County, L. L. doing considerable damage. At Jamaica the house of Charles Clifton, in Washington-st., was struck by lightning and damaged to the extent of $200. The inmates, although greatly alarmed, were not injured. At East Jamaica a cherry-tree on the premises of John Cocine was struck by lightning and three pigs and several chickens were killed. At Foster's Meadow two cows, owned by Henry Schmidt, that had taken refuge from the storm under a tree in the pasture lot, were struck by lightning and killed. The barn and dwelling of H. Duryea, at Hempstead, were also struck by lightning and badly damaged. In many piaces the fruit trees were badly damaged. In many piaces the fruit trees were badly damaged by the breaking off by the wind of the heavily-laden boughs.

The residents of Seventh-st., Long Island City, were alarmed by shrieks and cries of murder coming from the top floor of a house occupied by a family named Gordon, at midnight on Saturday. The family lives on the top floor, and the neighbors found Frank Gordon bleeding profusely from a wound about two inches long just below the left ear, and Mrs. Gordon bleeding from cuts on ber right hand and throat. Mrs. Gordon said that she had had some words with her husband and he had attempted to cut her throat with a large knife. In the struggle her fingers were cut by the knife. When he saw the blood he supposed that he had killed her and he immediately cut his own throat. The wounds of neither, however, were dangerous. Gordon, who was arrested, refused to make any statement of the affair, and was locked up in the county jail. Mrs. Gordon was seen yesterday by a reporter, but she refused to give any information. "All I have to say," she declared, "is that my husband went to Boston last week to bury his brother, and I suppose the bother and worry must have affected his head." CHARGED WITH A BRUTAL ASSAULT.

John Gardner, a tailor, living at No. 295 Madisonst, and Thomas McNally, a liquor dealer, at No. 436 Grand-st, in the Easex Market Police Court yesterday were charged with committing a brutal assault on Mary Curley, age thirty, of No. 55 Hester-st. The woman swore that while she was delivering milk shortly after 3 o'clock the prisoners, togother with another man, who had escaped, knocked her down and forcibly dragged her into the hallway of No. 3 Hester-st., where they committed the assault. Officer Lemnein, of the Thirteenth Precinct, who made the arrest, stated that hearing the woman's cries for help he burst in the door leading to the hall, and found the woman struggling with three men. One of them made his escape, and Gardner had to be clubbed into submission. Gardner told Justice Ford that the officer had had a grudge against him for some time, and that he had besten him unmerelfully for spite. The Judge held the two men for trial. POLICEMAN CHARGED WITH ASSAULT A POLICEMAN CHARGED WITH ASSAULT. Whiteled Hildebrandt, an officer of the Twenty-hird Precinct, charged James Fogarty, of No. 304 East One-hundred-and-seventh-st., in the Harlem Police Court yesterday with disorderly conduct while drunk. The prisoner was fined $5. After the officer had left the court William Shea, of No. 301 East One-hundred-and-seventh-st., a middls-aged han, whose eye bore the marks of a recent blow, stated to Justice Murray that Hildebrandt had onbbed fhe prisoner just committed in front of his fouse. Mr. Shea says that he demanded to know what the officer's number was, when the officer, with a shout that he would give him his number, when him a blow in the face with his elenched fist. It, Shea said that he had his child in his arms so the time, and upon examination the child's clothing was found to be spotted with blood, as was also

Mr. Shea's shirt-front. Several witnesses were present who had seen the assault. When questioned, Mr. Shea could give no satisfactory reason why he had not complained while the officer was in court. Justice Murray therefore ordered him to appear in court this morning, when the officer will be present.

WORK OF THE SUMMER PHYSICIANS.

CHILDREN'S COMPLAINTS INCREASING. THE STOICISM OF THE POOR-TWO PATIENT SISTERS AND A BLIND MAN.

THE STOICISM OF THE POOR—TWO FAILES. SISTERS AND A BLIND MAN.

The reports of the extra summer corps of sanitary inspectors for the third week were deposited at headquarters yesterday morning, the percentage of illness showing a slight increase as compared with the first two weeks. Thus far the general condition of the tenement-house population has been satisfactory, less disease prevailing than last year at this season. The unassigned districts, including Mulberry and Baxter sis., among others, are now under regular medical inspection, and the work in all directions is going on rapidly and successfully. In many of the smaller and more crowded districts the inspectors have nearly completed their rounds. Although the average health of children remains satisfactory, there has been a decided increase of cholera infantom during the last week, and August will probably give a large percentage of deaths from this disease. But the duties of the inspector are not confined to this numerous class of sufferers. He finds among adults many cases calling for advice and treatment, and serious inroads are made upon his time and strength by this extra labor. Contrary to general opinion the extremely poor do not proclaim their grievances, often bearing the keenest bodily suffering with a stoicism which is almost marvellous.

do not proclaim their grievances, often bearing the keenest bodily suffering with a stoicism which is almost marvellous.

In one room two old women were found, their eyes dim with long hours of toil and one in the lats stages of a disease which in a higher walk of life would have made the unfortunate sufferer helpiess months before. Both women were old, both were wasted by privation and worn with incessant toil. But one was a sight rarely, seen even in the wards of the great metropolitan hospitals. Wasted literally to a skeleton, it seemed strange that such an utter wreck could still struggle on to prolong a life which disease and poverty had made one ceaseless, unending torture. The women were working on coarse cheap clothing and scarcely raised their cyes when the inspector entered. At first little information could be gained, but finally the women told their story. Loss through the failure of a bank in which all their savings were placed had compelled them to resort to their present employment. Two years ago the sick one began to fail, and she had gradually gotten worse and worse, and now she could only work a few hours a day because, when the pains came on, she lost control of herself and could not coutinue her work; besides, her eyes were failing. She had seen doctors, but none had helped her. They hoped to keep out of the almshouse, but it was hard work and the rent was high. No, she would not go to the hospital. She could not leave her sister and was afraid of hospitals. She hoped to be better in the autumn, but the hot weather was hard to bear if one were not strong. There was no complaint, only a "plain, unvarnished tale" giving a picture of a life which had only two elements—unceasing toil and unceasing pain. And yet these women did not contrast their lot with that of others; they seemed to expect nothing; they were even satisfied and thankful if the pittance gained by twelve or fifteen hours' confining labor, would give them enough food to support life and keep the rent paid.

BOUNDARIES OF HELL-GATE PILOTS.

George M. Horton, a Hell-Gate pilot, yesterday made the following statement with regard to his rescue of three residents of Northport, R.L., on the Sound on Saturday:

"These men had started on an excursion in a small yacht, and when off Eaton's, Neck the yacht capsized in a squall. I chanced to be near at hand and went to their rescue, or they would have been drowned. The limit of the cruising-ground for Hell-Gate pilots is from the Battery to Little Gull Island, the upper end of Long Island Sound; but for some reason the port-wardens of this city have interpreted the limit at Sand's Point. Had I adhered to the latter rule these three men would have been lost. The yacht was picked up by a schooner and taken into Northport."

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Death passed close to Theodore Brown, collector Reitzner's brewery. Saturday night, and only the presence of mind of a flagman of the Long Island Railroad saved him. After collecting a bill at John Garrity's liquor store in New Lote, Mr. Brown sprang into his wagon and started across the Atlantic-ave. track, and touching up his horses, they grew nervous and started on a run just as a through train approached the crossing at the rate of over fifteen miles an hour. The flagman's back was toward the team, as he was engaged in signalling the train, and he did not see the flying horses until they were nearly upon the track, and the train only seventy-five feet away. With a quick movement he seized the reins, and throwing his whole strength into the action, he turned them aside, nearly upsetting the wagon, but preventing a fatal collision. A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

The Central Labor Union met in secret in the Patent Ventilated Hall, in East Thirteenth-st., yeaterday afternoon, with George K. Lloyd, of the Atlas Labor Club, in the chair. A committee of fifteen was appointed to visit the unions and agitate the subject of a labor hall. A committee of five was appointed to wait on the corporation counsel, and ascertain why he had not given an opinion as requested by the Board of Aldermen, on the legality of the Saturday half-holiday resolution, and to find out whether Police Commissioner French holds his office legally. The Clothing Cutters' Union offered half of its strike fund to the Cigarmakers Progressive Union, and the Unhoisterers offered $50 a week until the lockout is over. The Brassworkers protested against the resolution making the meetings secret.

While Henry Nichols, of No. 450 Canal-st., was at work carrying watermelous into the basement of John Donovan's store, in Hudsen-st., on Saturday afternoon, two young men, James O'Connor and Damet Lillis, annoyed him by calling him names and rolling watermelous under his feet as he descended the steps. Nichols at first took it in good jest, but losing his patience at last he seized one of them by the collar and rolled him down upon the steps. This angered the pair and Lillis threatened to do him bodily harm. After supper Nichols visited Henry Smith's cigar store, at No. 220 Hudson-st. While there O'Connor entered, and, after purchasing a cigarette, told Nichols to come out and settle the quarrel of the afternoon, but Nichols refused to leave the store. Soon afterward Lawrence Nichols, age twenty, a brother of Henry Nichols, called and asked the latter why he did not go home. He replied that he was afraid to go alone. Both young men then left the store tagether. They had reached Canal-st, when they met O'Connor and Lillis surrounded by a crowd of ruffians. O'Connor immediately rushed upon Henry Nichols and began to beat him about the head with his fists. As the two were well matched no attempt was made to separate them. Lawrence Nichols remarked that his brother could defend himself with his assistance, when Daniel Lillis, O'Connor's companion, drew a dirk knife and plunged it into his shoulder and arm several times. He then made a final thrust into Nichols's stomach, dropped the knife and fied.

Henry Nichols, on seeing what Lillis had done, broke away from O'Connor, pursued his brother's assailant across the street and seized him just as he was darting around a corner. According to the testimony of several eye-witnesses, Nichols delivered his prisoner into the hands of Police Officer Donovan, of the Eighth Precinct, who, after leading him up Wattsst. a short distance, allowed him to escape. O'Connor was arrested and taken to the station. In the meantime an ambulance had been summoned and the DERER TO ESCAPE.

The rumor that the manufacturers intended opening their shops to-day to all eigarmakers not members of the Progressive Union could not be verified yesterday. The officers of the Progressive Union profess to be indifferent to the course that may be pursued by the manufacturers in this regard. OSTRICH-FARMING IN THE SOUDAN.

Prom a Khartoum Letter in The London Daily News.

The "Hains" Arabs originally came from Darfour, and are nomads. They breed camels, which they use for their caravans. The Government makes them pay heavy imposts on these. This accounts for their hostility to the "Turks." as all Egyptians are called. They are also great farmers of ostriches, in fact the only tribe who keep tame ones. The inclosure or parks are twenty miles round, and the birds are fed on dourn and get water twice a day. Their pairing time is at the end of April, and the ergs are batched in May. The old cocks not wanted for breeding are plucked; formerly once a year; now three times. The value of a cock is reckoned at four camels, that of a hen two, mousy being scasce or sometimes unknown. The value of things is estimated in this manner and one is put in mind of the old word "pecuna," derived from "pecus," and the coins stamped with the effigy of a sheep. It may not be unisteresting to some of your readers to know the mercantile point of view by which "feathers," are judged. They are divided into three classes. The first or most valuable are "living feathers," taken from a wild bird that has been killed; second, "dead feathers," those of birds found dead; third, "tame feathers," those plucked from tame birds. "Live feathers" which rejects the sand; that is the way this is accounted for. Tame feathers are I consulted to be caten by insects; they have not the natural "oil" which protects the wild birds, and they are plucked three times in the year.

AMONG PARIS RAG-PICKERS.

From a Letter in The London Globe.

Great precautions are being taken by the sanitary authorines to prevent the cholera from being introduced into France. The harbor-master at every port has had instructions to submit every suspected vessel to quarantine, and every gnarantee has been given those who are anxious for the public health. If the efforce and only be imported, the Parisians have nothing to apprehend, but if the fell disease is of spontaneous generation, fostered by bad dramance and by the odor arising from fermenting garbage, the hot weather will soon produce an epidemic calculated to declimate the densely populated quarters of the city. The smell in the streets at night is becoming worse and worse, and those who venture further toward the fortifications on the northern side are half suffocated by the pestilential air they are compelled to breathe. The lodging-houses are to be rigorously visited and disinfected by order of the Prefect of Police, but nothing is likely to be done to introduce proper sanitary measures in the industrial quarters, such as the Route de la Révolte, where the monemployed in the sugar refineries mingle with the rag-pickers huddled together in huta, and surrounded by the rars, hones, etc., which make up the midnight horvest of the chiffonnier. Few have visited the celebrated assomnoir, which hangs like some leprous sore against the walls of a clean and smart grocery store kept by a woman who wears a silk gown in her shop of a Sunday afternoon, and has the custom of all her neighbors.

sore against the wails of a clean and smart grocery store kept by a woman who wears a silk gown in her shop of a Sunday afternoon, and has the custom of all her neighbors.

No one would ever think that such a clean, neat establishment as this grocery shop could adjudn the dark, dismal-looking burette where the rag-pleker spends his money in drinking and gambilag.

The walls are covered with roughly executed sketches. There is the portrait of the "Mateuct," or sailor—the Garbhidd of the rag-plekers. He had been all round the world in a man-of-war, and had served in the coastingtrade on board a merchantima in the days when pirates swept the main and neither asked for nor gave quarter. He spin yarn on yarn, showed them his breast, arms and body covered with sears, and told them how often as had looked death in the face. He was the hero of his comrades, and when he died they bought the tin pannikin from which he had so often drunk, and hung it above his portrait surrounded by a wreath of immorielles purchased by subscription. Robesplerre, painted in colors, has his place on the walls. Henri Rochefort stares at the company along with Victor Hugo, M. Theirs, and the Pope, beaide the death of Louis XVI. and the legend of the Wandering Jow. The sketches are rough and grotesque, but there is nothing unsignity or indecent, and the artist who had drawn Napoleon Lin great coat and cooked hat has not been offended at the counter manifestation made by some rival who has given vent to his anti-Bonapartist deas by limming a cap of liberty and scrawing." and spirit into every fibre.

Many young men, for a year or two past, have worn moderately sing-fitting trousers. Some of them have not been satisfied with any thing short of "tighta." But the "dudes"—have they not induence! Indude they have. They have made tight-legged trousers so afterly ridiculous that sensible young men are disgusted, and they are no w, as a rule, ordering trousers with legs of medium width. Some, however, to get as far away from the milksops as possible, go to the other extreme, and wear full legs—almost a sailor pattern.

The artists of the frousers Department of Baldwig, the Clotnier, have just completed a set of patterns for the coming Fall that are perfection itself. Piease call, and try on a pair of the latest style. Prices are one-third less than custom shops ask for the same material, not so well cut or trimmed.

Baldwin, the Clothier.

ONE PRICE-C. O. D. SCROFULA,

Whether inherited or developed by circumstances, mis-fortune or neglect, if not suppressed, progresses by a gradual, unobserved and painless process. The glands en-large, the skin breaks out in sores and ulcers, the flesh wastes, and the bones decay. The best remedy for these serious evils is unquestionably flood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, restores the wasted form, drives away that tired feeling which invalids complain of, and infuses energy

Miss NELLIE MAINE, Rockville. Conn., was troubled for two years with terrible serofula sores on her neck. One was aslarge as her hand. She got discouraged, when a freed six yised Hood's Sarsaparills. She bought a bottle, and another and a third. After these the sores healed, and all signs of them have disappeared. She has not been troubled since. 20 SORES S YEARS.

When I began to take Hood's Sarsaparitla I had 20 scroft lous seres on my leg and all over my right foot. I have taken three bottles, and am on the fourth. I have but two seres left, and these are getting along first rate. I have had these sores for the last eight years.—THOMAS W. BAKTLETT, Provi-
